A.J.C. Head Tells Germans Christianity Is Real Target Of Anti-Semites

The president of the American Jewish Congress called on the German people to face the truth of their Nazi past. He urged that they change what he said was an attitude of "forgive and forget" to "remember — and to live it down."

Dr. Joachim Prinz, of Newark, N. J., spoke from the pulpit of the Cologne Synagogue. The desecration of the synagogue on Christmas morning set off a world-wide outbreak of anti-Semitic vandalism, says the New York Times. Noting that this was the twenty-seventh anniversary of Hitler's appointment as Chancellor, Rabbi Prinz said: "To silence those who want to remind the German people of what the Hitler era meant is to silence the conscience that is the only hope for a German democracy."

Dr. Prinz, who fled Nazi Germany in 1937, said the need for education was never more important in Germany because "anti-Semitism and Nazi convictions are still deep-rooted in the minds of the parent generation." In an interview later, he said the Germans seemed to have reached "an impasse" in their striving to build democracy. He was not optimistic. This outlook, he emphasized, was mainly based on what he had heard at a meeting of twenty-five leaders of the non-Jewish community in Berlin.

The meeting was with members of the West Berlin city government, Bishops of the Evangelical and Roman Catholic churches, representatives of youth organizations, and political parties. He found them, Rabbi Prinz said, in a "state of depression and bitter despair, not about anti-Semitism but about democracy itself as a way of life rather than as a political form."

All present at the meeting, he added, had despaired because the younger generation was "completely indifferent" toward political life and "doubts the validity of anything the political leaders say." In his sermon, Dr. Prinz called for the barring of Nazis from the Government, the judiciary, the military, and the educational system.

Post-war Germany, Dr. Prinz asserted, has been "intoxicated" and "bedazzled" by achieving economic prosperity so soon after defeat. But what the country needs more than an economic revival, he said, is a moral renaissance. He declared:

"It is this moral rebirth on the part of the German people as a whole which the world awaits."

Germany must understand, Dr. Prinz said, that the Jews were only "the symbol, the scapegoats of that hate we call anti-Semitism. The real targets are Christianity and democracy, civilization and the ethical values of society. It is time the German people understood this, faced to it — and acted upon it."

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is not sponsored by a group or an organization and which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Says Religious, Secular Parties In Israel Must Co-Exist

Moshe Chaim Shapiro, Israel's Minister of Interior, said in Atlantic City, N. J., that a "paramount problem" confronting his nation was the "co-existence" of religious and secular political parties. He said the various political parties, particularly those who are in his Government's coalition cabinet, must find a common denominator to subordinate their differences in a joint platform of unity, cooperation and loyalty for the welfare of Israel."

He spoke at the banquet-session of the golden jubilee convention of the Religious Zionists of America before 500 delegates, says the New York Times. Mr. Shapiro said Israel was confronted with three important issues in the next ten years. He listed these as economic consolidation, the absorption and integration of immigrants, and "security from the depradations, threats and boycotts of Arab neighbors."

He said the 1958 crisis over the question, "Who Is a Jew?" has been "resolved amicably and has been followed by the most harmonious association between the Religious Zionist party and the Israeli Government." Jewish religious law, he added, "now fully determines who is to be recognized and identified as a Jew in Israel." Mr. Shapiro resigned his post as Minister of Religions at the time of that crisis in protest against the secular definition of what constitutes a member of the Jewish people.

In his address, Mr. Shapiro said that Israel devoted "her first decade to military and security needs on a massive scale," adding that in the next ten years his nation must concentrate "on those aspects of cultural and religious life which will make the state a spiritual beacon from which will

Newhouse, N. Y. Publisher, Founds Center At Syracuse U. With $2 Million; Will Leave Most Of Vast Estate There; Sons Must Work

Syracuse University disclosed plans to establish what it described as the world's largest center for the study of journalism, television and other media of mass communication. The education and research center will be founded with an initial gift of $2,000,000 from Samuel I. Newhouse, the publisher, and his wife. It will be on an eight-acre Communications Quadrangle adjoining Syracuse's main campus, says the New York Times. "Whatever funds are necessary to complete the center will be provided," Mr. Newhouse said in a statement at his home, 730 Park Avenue, New York.

Mr. Newhouse, who is 64 years old, the owner of fourteen newspapers, Condé Nast Publications and a number of television and radio stations, said he hoped to see the center, which will bear his name, completed within his lifetime.

In any event, Mr. Newhouse added, the center will be the first project of a philanthropic foundation that he and Mrs. Newhouse established in 1935. "Upon my death, the Foundation will receive 90 per cent of my estate, well in excess of $100,000,000," Mr. Newhouse said.

Half of the center's initial endowment will be used for the construction and operation of the first unit for a School of Journalism building and associated activities. This will represent an expansion of the university's twenty-five-year-old School of Journalism, which is headed by Dean Wesley Clark.

The other half will be used to finance instructional programs and provide fellowships for graduate work, research in mass media and opportunities for mid-career study by practicing professionals.

Dr. William P. Tolley, the university's chancellor, said: "While the first unit will provide facilities for the School of Journalism, other buildings will be added subsequently for educational television and the whole complex of communications programs in radio-television, audio-visual education, speech, reading, information services, communications research, and scholarly publishing.

"The combination of these facilities and the availability of funds for their operation will permit the center to achieve an inter-disciplinary and coordinated approach to education and research in the several mass media of far-reaching potential importance.

"By encouraging the closest relations with the social sciences and humanities and strongly emphasizing graduate work and specialized services for the industry, we hope to develop educational programs in mass media which are fundamental, philosophic, and public policy-oriented."

The chancellor added: "We see in the Newhouse Communications Center a new approach to the study of mass media. The aim is to achieve more distinguished and more responsible academic programs in the communications field."

Frank P. Piskor, the university's academic vice-president, will direct a year-long study of curriculum reorganization, staffing and the physical planning required for the expanded center, says the New York Times. The completion of plans and the actual construction of the journalism building is expected to take two years.

The restless five-foot, three-inch son of Russian immigrant parents, Samuel I. Newhouse has amassed more than $150,000,000 as a doctor of an uncommon sort. For thirty-eight years, Mr. Newhouse, who donated $2,000,000 this week to Syracuse University, has specialized in buying financially sick newspapers and curing them, sometimes merging them. His medicine works, judging by his ownership of fourteen newspapers, composing the third largest newspaper group in the country, and an assortment of magazines, television and radio stations.

At the age of 64, looking youthful despite chronic insomnia, still bustling on a stop-watch schedule, Mr. Newhouse continues to shop for newspapers. "I'm having too much fun to quit," he says. The Newhouse formula for putting a newspaper ledger in the black consists of chopping costs hard and perking up advertising, circulation and mechanical operations while leaving editorial matters to local management.

In Syracuse, two of the Newhouse newspapers — The Herald Journal, which has backed the Democratic party, and The Post-Standard, of Republican sympathies — have attacked each other editorially. Mr. Newhouse is a registered Democrat.

In conversation, Mr. Newhouse displays a gentle manner. But in business, "S. I." (he says the I. is just an initial) can be tough. He has not backed off from long, costly, labor strife when he has felt that a union was blocking the most efficient operation of one of his newspapers.

Born in New York, the eldest of eight children, Mr. Newhouse went to work at the age of 12 for a lawyer, Herman Lazarus, who sent the youngster on his career four years later with the order: "Sammy, go and look after the paper", says the New York Times. A self-styled "brash kid," the young Newhouse took over the ailing Bayonne Times, of which Mr. Lazarus was majority stockholder, and soon turned it into a profitable venture.

He studied in night school, passed his bar examination and, at the age of 26, bought his first newspaper. The Staten Island Advance, for $88,000. Thirty-three years later, he purchased The Birmingham News and its radio and television stations for $18,642,000.

In addition to his Syracuse newspapers, Mr. Newhouse also owns The Jersey Journal, The Newark Star-Ledger, The Long Island Press, The Long Island Star-Journal, The Harrisburg Patriot and The News in Pennsylvania; The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, The Portland Oregonian, and The Huntsville Times in Alabama. Of his fourteen newspapers, twelve were losing money when Mr. Newhouse bought them.

With his newspaper properties flourishing, Mr. Newhouse inquired about a year ago if the Curtis Publishing Company, the leader in the magazine field, was for sale. The answer was no, but Mr. Newhouse did not give up his intention to expand into magazine publishing.

Mr. Newhouse and his wife, (Mitzi), live in a twelve-room Park Avenue duplex, but it is hard to say just where Mr. Newhouse's office is. Indefatigably on the move by train and air and in his telephone-equipped black Cadillac, Mr. Newhouse works mainly out of an old, battered briefcase.

He has something of an office at The Newark Star-Ledger, where he shares a pool secretary. Reputed to have an encyclopedic knowledge of the newspaper field, Mr. Newhouse is well-known for quick telephoned decisions.

Mr. Newhouse says he has drawn up a will that will keep his newspaper empire intact after his death, says the New York Times.

"I don't want any outside interest, such as some banker, dictating how the papers should be run," he declares.

The newspapers will be bequeathed to a philanthropic foundation free of inheritance tax. Mr. Newhouse's two sons, Samuel I., Jr., 32 years old, who is in charge of The Newark Star-Ledger, and Donald Edward, 30, who heads the Jersey Journal, will retain control through the possession of the only voting stock. Mr. Newhouse said this stock would consist of only about ten shares, and his sons will have to depend on their salaries for their income.

"They will have jobs; if they don't do their jobs well, they will be out of luck," he said. Mr. Newhouse said he had earmarked 10 per cent of his estate for his wife, whom he described as "my heavyweight." (She is five feet tall and weighs seventy-four pounds). When Mrs. Newhouse married the publisher in 1924, she gave up her school studies in fashion designing. Last year, she was back in the fashion world.

Her husband bought Condé Nast Publications, publisher of Vogue, Glamour and other magazines, and then rounded out these new interests by acquiring Street & Smith Publications, says the New York Times. Mrs. Newhouse is on the board of directors of Condé Nast.

$1 Million In Cash Is What Histadrut Drive Drive Wants

The mid-winter Roll Call Conference of the National Committee for Labor Israel to be held at the Hotel Commodore, in New York, on February 21, will climax a nation-wide effort to collect a million dollars in cash for transmission to Israel, according to the national chairman, Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein. An attendance of 1,500 delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada is expected at the conclave. Speakers will be: Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, who recently visited Israel; Knesset Member Haim J. Zadok, currently on an American tour on behalf of the Histadrut Campaign; and Simcha Pratt, Minister Plenipotentiary of the State of Israel.

Rabbi Weinstein said that in 1959, the National Committee for Labor Israel and the Pioneer Women had remitted the sum of $2,698,791 to aid the pioneering forces and new immigrants in Israel. The funds were used to assist Kupat Holim provide medical care to 1,313,000 Israeli men, women, and children; to provide vocational training for youths and adults; absorb new immigrants and ease the transfer of urban families to agricultural settlement; educational and cultural activities; youth and sports programs; aid to religious workers; the construction of a cultural center at Nazareth; and creating work opportunities for new immigrants. The program of Moetzet Hapoalot (Working Women's Council) supported by Pioneer Women received $875,000. In view of the latest developments in Israel, a massive effort must be made to raise the full $5,000,000 quota of the Histadrut Campaign in 1960, Rabbi Weinstein said.

The Jews In Turkey

BY ALFRED JOACHIM FISHER

When in 1492 Sultan Beyazit opened the gates of the great Osman Empire to the Spanish Jews, he spoke the memorable words: "Through the inquisition King Ferdinand has ruined his own country, but has made mine rich." The existence of Jewish communities on the territory of the present-day Turkish Republic, however, dates back to far earlier times, and some of them have survived to this day. To trace their origin is a difficult task because they prefer to remain in obscurity. Even historians often have to admit defeat and have no alternative but to accept somebody else's testimony.

Tarsus on the southern shore of Anatolia was the birthplace of the Disciple Paul who, as we are told, subsequently attempted to convert the Jews of Konya. Every trace of them has disappeared. Konya's only significance to the Moslem world lies in its Seldshuk monuments and cultural relics and in the Mewlana cult.

The more remote East Anatolian provinces are further from the intellectual centre of Istanbul than Vienna, and their Jewish communities, therefore, lived in isolation. Indeed, it was easier for them to make contact with the Jewries of neighbouring Iran, Iraq, and Syria. Their origins, too, are shrouded in darkness. They themselves claim to be descendants of the first Judaic kingdom. Sometimes they also call themselves Babylonians, and their native tongue is allegedly pure Aramaic. However, they also speak Kurdish, Arabic, and Turkish.

Jewish centres were Hakari, Mardin, Diabekir, Gaziantep, Baskari, and Tokat, where now only five families are left. The synagogues were usually built underground and, like the mosques, had no chairs. While Moslem "heretics" were brutally treated throughout the centuries of the Osman Empire, the Turks generally exerted no pressure on the "religions of the Book", Christianity and Judaism, to adopt the Islam. In far-off regions inaccessible to the long arm of the Sublime Porte, it was, of course, not always possible to prevent forcible conversions.

This explains why the Jews would often practice their religion in secret. To do so openly, moreover, would have been inadvisable in view of the primitive and fanatically Moslem majority population in those areas. The Jews of East Anatolia have for the most part migrated. Their preferred destinations were Istanbul and Israel.

In Diabekir the visitor is shown an ancient Torah. Fifteen years ago one of the Ramban's works was discovered here also. According to some Jewish sources, Maimonides himself wrote it in Diabekir, but no historic proof of this has yet been found.

Prior to the Turkish conquest of Istanbul it was the main centre of Byzantine Jews, also known as Romaniots. Their second largest community was in Izmir (Smyrna). All available data about them show that they were poor, with a very low social and cultural level. It is said that some of the oldest Byzantine churches originally were synagogues. All these Byzantine communities were sucked up by the Spanish tidal wave which rolled over them, although some Greek family names have been preserved. Certain Greek idioms, moreover, are found in the Spaniolic language, the so-called Ladino.

Certain decrees affecting non-Moslems could be circumvented, during the Osman era, through payment of Bakishish according to a fixed scale. Looking through old archives I found evidence that some rabbis also served as judges, that the communities had prisons at their disposal and that their jurisdiction included punishment.

Apart from the rabbis, certain Jewish personalities were held in high esteem. Thus, Donna Grazia Mendes, a wealthy and highly cultured woman, succeeded in bringing about the first intervention by a State on behalf of Jews living in another country. The central figure of this action was Suleiman the Magnificent. Donna Grazia asked for his assistance following a threat by Pope Paul IV that the Jews of Ancona were to be burned as heretics. Moved by her request, the mighty Sultan sent special emissaries to the Holy See. Should the Jews be touched, Suleiman would take revenge on the Pope's ships. The executions did not take place. Under the same Sultan an attempt was made to create a Jewish kingdom in Galilee. For economic reasons, however, the idea did not materialize.

The Spanish Jews in the Osman Empire which included also the important port of Saloniki, were given every facility to pursue commercial and financial transactions. Their predominance was such that subsequent Ashkenasi immigrants soon spoke nothing but Ladino. Literature and journalism flourished, but never reached the spiritual heights achieved in Spain. Side by side with prosperity there was also a large Jewish proletariat.

During the prolonged periods of capitulation and concessions, foreign Jews were accorded the same privileges in trade and before the law as all other foreigners. At the same time, the Osman subjects themselves found good opportunities in the economy of this huge empire which included Palestine, the Arab countries and a large part of the Balkans. It is interesting to note that most of the honorary consuls at that time were Jews.

Ataturk introduced a wave of nationalism. Religion was deleted from the school curriculum and its teaching resumed only a few years ago. The Jews were probably the only religious group who saw no hardship in the ban on clerical attire outside places of worship. Their economic situation deteriorated somewhat, but since trade and commerce are not the favourite occupations of the Turks, they continue to be the domain of Greeks, Armenians, and Jews, primarily in Istanbul. With few exceptions, they were not admitted to high official positions.

During World War II, the Saraoglou Government introduced "Varlik", a war profit tax, which in practice was imposed only on the minority groups. Those unable to meet the demands were deported to Anatolian labour camps. Even aged persons were not spared. Countless numbers were ruined by this measure. The fact that the three minority groups managed to re-establish their position to a remarkable degree is a measure of their perseverance and capabilities.

It is no doubt due to memories of "Varlik" that Turkish Jews are more eager to emigrate than ever before. At the end of World War II, their number was 85,000 which has meanwhile decreased to some 45,000; 35,000 chose Israel for their new home, and only 2-3,000 of them came back to Turkey. Today there is no Jewish family in Turkey who has not at least one relative in Israel. Other countries chosen for emigration were the United States, Canada, and South America.

Furthermore, the majority of the Jews live in Istanbul, which is equally attractive to non-Jews. This results in serious social problems, among them a tragic housing shortage. According to conservative estimates, about nine-tenths of Turkish Jewry now lives in Istanbul, which is also the seat of Grand Rabbi Raffael Saban, their acknowledged spiritual leader. I was shown twenty synagogues in Istanbul, some of which, however, were in a dilapidated condition. Their names indicate the origin of their founders — Ochrid, Saloniki, Istipol, Cadiz, etc. Of particular interest are the Karaites. They recognize only the Bible and not the subsequent writings of the rabbis. They regard themselves as the only real Jews but are not recognized by the others. The Israeli Consulate, however, does not join this hairsplitting dispute and issues visas to them. Also worth mentioning is a special Armenian community from which a large part of the Jewish ritual was derived, together with the Armenian language.

One group of some 2,000, called Doenmes, whose ancestors adopted Islam under the leadership of the false Messiah Sabbatai Zvi, can still be identified and are often regarded as not being full-fledged Moslems. Some of them hold high offices in politics, economic and cultural life, the press, etc. The custom of marrying within their own ranks is only recently on oc-

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

FEIGENSON-WISEMAN

The marriage of Miss Claire Wiseman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Wiseman, 5273 Prince of Wales Avenue, to Major Thomas Feigenson, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Feigenson, of Philadelphia, Pa., took place at the Post Chapel, at Fort Hamilton, in Brooklyn, N.Y., Rabbi Louis Barish officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Mrs. Edward Goodson, sister of the bride, was matron of honour. Selvyn Feigenson, brother of the groom, was best man. Major and Mrs. Feigenson spent their wedding trip in Miami, Florida. They have taken up residence in New York.

OSER-SANDERS

The marriage of Miss Sandra Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Sanders, of Vancouver, B.C., to Edward A. Oser, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Oser, 3421 Drummond Street, took place at Beth Israel Synagogue, in Vancouver, on Sunday, December 20, at half-past five o'clock. Rabbi Bert A. Woythaler officiated with Cantor Abraham Deutsch assisting. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a long gown of white lame brocade, with a bouffant skirt, fully crinolined, with a small train. The tight bodice was enhanced with a wide neckline, forming a V in front, edged with seed-pearl-beads, which also trimmed the three-quarter sleeves. Her full, finger-tip veil of illusion net fell from a small, lace half-bonnet, trimmed with seed-pearl-beads. She carried a white bible covered with a white orchid and blue feathered carnations. Mrs. J. Rubin, of Portland, Maine, was matron of honour. The bridesmaids were Mrs. H. Vines and Mrs. H. Caine. Irving Glassner was best man. The ushers were: Harvey Sanders, brother of the bride; and Dr. Lawrence Wasel. Pale blue and white carnations and gladioli decorated the Synagogue and hall. Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Oser spent their wedding trip in Sun Valley, Idaho. They have taken up residence in Vancouver, B.C. There for the marriage was Dr. L. J. Sheps, 4817 Lacombe Avenue, Montreal, uncle of the bride.

casion being disregarded. As recently as 1937 I found amongst the Doenmes clandestine Jews who knew Hebrew and celebrated all Jewish festivals. By now they have become great exceptions.

Until 1923 Jewish children attended French schools set up by the Alliance Israélite Universelle. The French language often replaced Ladino. In some of the better Istanbul hotels and restaurants today one sometimes finds people conversing in French; they are almost certainly Jews. This often evokes hostile comments by nationalistic Turks, and results in press polemics.

Turkish, however, has become the medium of instruction for the young Jews. In addition they learn French and Hebrew, of which they have five to six lessons each per week. In Istanbul alone, there are four Jewish elementary schools and one grammar school. (48 weekly lessons, instead of the usual 34). 2,500 children, representing about two-thirds of the total, attend Jewish schools. One attraction is the fact that all are given equal opportunities, which is not always true in the Turkish schools. Government - employed teachers conduct the final examinations at the grammar school. At the most recent distribution of prizes they had to admit that the pupils of the Jewish grammar school showed the highest achievements of all public and private schools.

Whereas the Jewish grammar school is not supported by public funds, the elementary schools receive a small subsidy. Under Ataturk the training of clergy was banned in Turkey. When this ban was recently revoked, the Jews followed the example of Moslems and Christians in setting up seminaries. Their rabbinical seminary is to fill the urgent need of many communities following the Spanish ritual, including those outside Turkey. Formerly, Saloniki supplied most of the Latin American countries with their rabbinical personnel. Now Istanbul also provides special courses for cantors, shochtim, and mohelim.

The community's hospital and Polyclinic — the latter with 80 per cent non-Jewish patients — are staffed only by Jewish doctors and receive financial support from the Government. The Old Age Home houses 28 people, but the demand by far exceeds this number. The Jewish orphanage in Istanbul cares for 48 children.

Special emphasis is placed on juvenile care. 350 Jewish children are given a daily hot meal and an entirely new wardrobe once a year. One welfare organisation has founded a summer camp on one of the idyllic Princes Islands where 150 boys and girls enjoy fresh air and sunshine and good food and are able to forget temporarily their unhealthy existence in the narrow streets of the old parts of Stambul. Balat on the Golden Horn, for example, resembles a real, over-populated ghetto. A sanatorium for the prevention of tuberculosis among juveniles was opened by the community on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus. The situation is ideal, and the food is excellent.

Turkish law does not permit taxation of community members. All the community can do is to bring moral pressure to bear upon its members, on the basis of a financial evaluation, and this method is usually successful. Welfare organisations are also socially active, and the youth group arranges cultural events every Saturday. The Turkish Jews are not allowed to found a Zionist organisation or to join the World Jewish Congress.

It was interesting to observe how strongly the old traditions have been preserved. For instance, some ancient Spanish songs are still being sung in Jewish homes. Philologists have discovered that Ladino contains countless words which no longer exist in modern Spanish, even though there is closer affinity between them than, for example, between Yiddish and German.

Apart from the East Anatolian communities mentioned above, there are only a few smaller ones, but a considerable number of Jewish families are scattered all over the vast area. Many cemeteries are a reminder of centres no longer in existence. Only 1,500 Jews are left in Izmir, which at one time was second only to Saloniki in its importance in Jewish life; Edirne (Adrianopel) near the Greek border has 3,000 Jews (30,000 in 1948), and a few dozen families live in the new capital of Ankara.

While the majority of Turkish Jews were engaged in trade, there were a few Jewish farmers in the European part of Thrace. They were not, however, invited to participate in the national economic programme. During the past ten years there has also been a substantial development in private industry, both light and heavy. Many Jews have successfully entered these new branches, at the same time withdrawing increasingly from banking and finance. The percentage of Jews in the liberal professions has grown though it is still much below that of most other countries. They are primarily engineers, lawyers, doctors and dentists. Almost legendary is the name of old Dr. Ginsburg of Istanbul whose memoirs are widely read. His dental patients included Turkey's Presidents from Ataturk downward, the Prime Ministers and most other members of the different Governments.

One member of contemporary Turkish Jewry is a scholar of international stature: Professor Abraham Galante whose historic studies of Spaniolic Jews are being quoted everywhere. Istanbul's university was sometimes jokingly described as the best German university, since numerous German scholars exiled by the Third Reich found there refuge and a spiritual home. Turkish Jews today have virtually no prospects there.

To complete the sociological picture, it must be stated that the number of those requiring aid far exceeds the community's means. The majority of the Jews, as the minorities generally, incline politically towards the ruling Democrats rather than the Opposition. In fact, the votes of the three groups were decisive in assuring Menderes' victory in Istanbul, in spite of the still bitter memory of the night of September 6, 1955, which began as a Government-condoned pogrom against the Greeks, but gradually included Jews, Armenians, and even foreigners. The scars left by "Varlik", however, are still deeper. Until recently, the Government party used to nominate one Jew, one Armenian, and one Greek candidate for election, but on October 27, 1957, this was changed to two of each group.

Turkey maintains active trade relations with Israel. Unfortunately, they are not well balanced, and Turkey is substantially in debt to Israel, as to many other countries. Israeli experts are sought in Turkey, and several Israeli contract firms are building houses, hotels, and factories in Turkey.

Politically the mutual relationship was excellent while Ismet Inonu's Republican People's Party was in power which regarded the Arabs as a negative element. Adnan Menderes and his Democrats, however, are courting the Arabs. While the Arab demand for severing diplomatic relations with Israel has so far not been acceded to, the Turkish ambassador in Tel-Aviv was recalled during the Suez-Sinai crisis, and only a Charge d'Affaires remained.

But today Adnan Menderes' tactics are being sharply criticised by the newly strengthened Opposition, which rejects any intervention in the Arab-Israel conflict since its sympathies lie more on the side of progressive Israel, and against Communist infiltration, than with her reactionary feudalistic opponents.

Travel Tips For Every Tourist

A practical and efficient man's wardrobe for the air traveller should be light and contain only the essentials. This applies to the ship traveller as well, since he may find himself taking side trips in Europe by air. Depending upon the class of transportation, the man will need at least one suit, a pair of slacks and a sports jacket; and may also need a dinner jacket and trousers and a dress shirt. The man travelling in Europe in the spring and early summer, should have at least another suit and a warm all-purpose coat; and several sweaters. A coat with a detachable lining and lots of pockets is the best choice; and the folding plastic raincoat is a valuable extra to have along.

Washable synthetic materials for shirts make it easier for the traveller if he plans to wash the clothes himself; and a suit of a synthetic material is light for warm weather and easy to carry. Materials which need to be washed carefully should be left at home unless the traveller is going to stay in first-rate hotels where he can be sure that the cleaning and pressing services are of the very best. Comfortable walking shoes and all-purpose sports clothes must always be included.

The man travelling with an electric razor should check on whether he needs to carry a current converter and a special plug to fit all types of European electric sockets.

The best luggage is lightweight luggage where suits and trousers can be packed easily without crushing. A small folding extra bag is always handy to use for packing up gifts and purchases; and luggage should always be light enough for the traveller to carry it himself if he needs to. It makes it quicker in getting from place to place, and much simpler to get through customs easily.

Man-made fibres are a boon to the travelling man in a hurry. No-iron fabrics mean he is never caught with his shirts at the laundry and packing need take only minutes. He can travel for weeks with only the shirt on his back once he has mastered the drip-dry technique.

Here's the approved procedure for hotel-room washing of a drip-dry shirt:

Don't use hotel soap; always carry a small container of detergent and squeeze the shirt through lots of warm suds; heavily soiled spots such as collar and cuffs can be spread out along the edge of the sink and rubbed with concentrated detergent, using the tail of the shirt for the scrubbing job; rinse thoroughly with warm water to carry away every trace of suds. Lift the shirt from the water without wringing or squeezing and shake off surplus water over the bathtub. Place it on a wooden hanger (a metal one might rust) and button the top button. Smooth collars and cuffs with the fingers and hang it up on the shower rail to drip dry.

The lady traveller should have an adaptable wardrobe where the skirts and blouses can be mixed and matched. A good all-purpose suit, an all-important "little black dress"; a cocktail skirt and blouses; a folding or collapsible hat of jersey or non-crushable silk; nylon lingerie; a stole of wool which is light and packable; a glamorous sweater, and an all-purpose sweater will always come in handy; as well as a knitted jersey dress, almost indispensable because it does not crush; a light coat with a detachable lining; comfortable walking shoes and a pair of dress-up shoes. Make-up in plastic bags; a big, "easy-to-carry" purse, with lots of compartments; lightweight luggage, all make the trip easier and more pleasant. The least extra packages which can be carried make it much easier for the lady traveller since there are not always porters available and neither are there always men travellers who are able to carry her packages as well as theirs.

A small bag with what the lady traveller needs as basic requirements is a handy extra since often, if there is heavy luggage it may be shipped ahead, or it may not arrive at the same time as the traveller at the destination.

When packing a suitcase, don't overlook the space inside shoes, for belts, brushes, and other small items; and each pair should be in plastic bag.

Travel accessories are catering to the easy washability of today's wardrobes. This year stores are offering lightweight plastic clothes pegs, little envelopes of detergents for the nightly wash, and even travelling clotheslines for hotel room use. Clothes take the journey better if packed systematically. Shoes and other heavy articles should be at the bottom of the case so their weight doesn't crush other clothing. Lingerie and sweaters can be tucked into corners. Suits and dresses travel smoothly if folded flat just under the lid; or rolled, and tied in bags.

The lady traveller travelling by ship can judge what she needs for extra clothes such as a dinner outfit, depending on the class she chooses. She has to look forward to weather in central and southern Europe, since it often is milder than in the United States; Paris, for instance, never has the extremes of cold found in New York; and it is, of course, warm enough on the Riviera in winter for sunbathing. Forty-four pounds of luggage, as limited on some flights, must cover a winter wardrobe, and all extras necessary to keep the trip smooth and tempers unruffled.

However, today's luggage has been designed for lightness and durability; as well as providing every assistance to the traveller: clothes don't crush when they are carefully packed in the newest luggage which is planned for every taste and style. A handy thing to remember is that name and address should be taped in each piece of luggage.

Every traveller should have passport number written down in each piece of luggage; an extra pair of glasses and sun glasses; extra flints and fluid for a cigarette lighter; spot remover; toilet soap; ball point pen and refills; cigarettes (can be bought on shipboard) band-aid, travel alarm clock; disposable tissue; wash cloths in plastic bags; sea-sick pills; extra passport pictures should the traveller need an extra visa at the last minute; and any good remedy against dysentery.

Currency can be converted in big cities from traveller's cheques purchased ahead of time. It is recommended to take travel, flight and baggage insurance; and personal insurance, all of which can be arranged through travel agents.

TIME TO GET GOING!

The tourist can go as an independent tourist or as a member of a group through travel agent planning very easily; or can arrange things himself. It is much easier to make all arrangements through the travel agent, since he has experience and know-how, and has much more available to him in contacts and information than the person making plans alone.

For the person who wants to go as an independent traveller, or in a tour, the travel agent can arrange every date, transportation arrangements and hotel accommodation ahead of time with great ease. This is particularly important for the person staying close to the most popular tourist spots, since every good hotel in every main city is booked ahead in advance by groups, or by travel agents arranging and planning well in advance. The travel agent will take care of everything, once he knows how much the traveller wants to spend, how much time he has and when he wants to go.

As a member of an escorted tour the traveller has practically nothing to worry about. His tour leader takes care of everything except personal extras. Sometimes travellers are part of a tour where arrangements are made for them to go from city to city by themselves, being put on trains or planes by a tour leader in one city and being met in the next city by the next leader to take over the group. A recognized travel agent is the most reliable way of planning.

Impartial advice is the most valuable service you get from your travel agent. He is an independent business man. No one underwrites him. No one owns him. He recommends the transportation company, the hotel, the resort and the season which will give his client the best vacation he can afford; arranges for passport and visa.

Most of the travel agent's services cost the customer nothing, because he receives commissions from the hotels, resorts and transportation companies. But there are exceptions.

Foreign and domestic independent tours (known to the trade as FITs and DITs) are custom-made for a client and usually involve a vast amount of work in planning and checking connections and timing. The agent's price includes a charge for this outlay of time and labor. In escorted tours, there is the added cost of the guide.

One of the most popular vacations is the package tour which includes transportation, accommodations, sightseeing, meals and other features. Package tour operators are the wholesalers of the trade; the agents who book them are the retailers.

The tourist travelling in a group on a conducted tour will be guided through the main tourist sights without any question. The traveller who is alone can arrange with the hotels or the main tourist agencies in the cities to take conducted tours which may last two or three hours, or involve a trip of one or two days. For instance, there is a tour from Rome, to Capri and Sorrento, in which the traveller joins a group leaving Rome in the morning stopping off at Naples on the way and spends the night in Sorrento, returning to Rome the end of the second day.

The wise traveller will arrange here, before leaving, for car-rental in Europe; or the traveller can plan to use a car in Europe as part of a car-purchase plan. This makes it easy for the traveller to get from one place to another, should he wish to travel alone, without being part of a conducted tour. Car-rental plans, or car-purchase plans give the traveller a much closer look at the countryside, and bring him in closer contact with the people of the countries.

Greek Line Olympia And Arkadia Have Full Range Of Sailings

The Greek Line's Olympia, the 23,000 ton flagship, sails from New York via Boston, to Mediterranean ports, to Israel. The Olympia features twenty-two public rooms, eight decks, air-conditioned dining, theatre and lounges; and two swimming pools. All of this is a wonderful way to combine the voyage with holiday-type days, filled with delight; and the famous Greek Line hospitality, delicious American food, and Kosher, too, of course. Regular sailings, all year, have convenient connections to Haifa.

The Greek Lines' Arkadia, of over 20,000 gross tons, can accommodate nearly fourteen hundred passengers for Trans-Atlantic voyages, in spacious and comfortable surroundings. The two dining rooms are air-conditioned, and there is a wide range of inviting lounges, cocktail bars, nightclubs, and ballrooms, some of which can be combined to form one full deck of continuous public rooms.

The Arkadia has one of the largest indoor swimming pools afloat, as well as an outdoor pool. Deck stewards and recreation officers can arrange for games and sports tournaments, selected movies, and parties. The Arkadia serves fine Continental cuisine, and famous efficient, friendly service by English-speaking, experienced stewards.

Trans-Canada Air Lines Offers Most One-Plane Services To Europe

Trans-Canada Air Lines will offer more one-plane services between Canada, the United Kingdom and Europe this summer than any other commercial air carrier. During the peak season of 1959, TCA operated 18 weekly return flights across the North Atlantic from Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver to London, Prestwick and Shannon in the United Kingdom, and Paris, Dusseldorf, Brussels, Vienna and Zurich in continental Europe, providing more than 2,500 one-way seats a week.

In June of this year, with the inauguration of Douglas DC-8 Jetliner service across the Atlantic, TCA will operate seven weekly return services with the 127-passenger, 550-mile-an-hour jets to the United Kingdom, and eight weekly return services to the United Kingdom and continental Europe with 82-passenger Super Constellations, providing more than 3,000 one-way seats a week.

All of the DC-8 flights will operate from Vancouver-Winnipeg-Toronto with three departing from Toronto direct to Prestwick and London, and four continuing to Montreal, then on to Prestwick and London. Three weekly Super Constellation flights will operate from Toronto and Montreal to Paris via Shannon, two continuing on to Zurich and one to Dusseldorf. Another weekly Super Constellation flight will operate from Toronto and Montreal through Prestwick to Brussels, Dusseldorf and Vienna.

Travellers from the West Coast will be able to fly direct to Europe on TCA's Hudson's Bay Route, a weekly Super Constellation service operating from Vancouver and Winnipeg to Prestwick and London. European travellers from the Atlantic provinces will be able to fly direct from Halifax to Glasgow and London on two weekly direct Super Constellation flights. One of these flights — both originate in Montreal — will continue on to Dusseldorf.

The remaining weekly Super Constellation flight will operate from Montreal through Gander to London. No matter where you live in Canada or where you want to travel in Europe, there's a TCA flight tailored to your travel plans, and a choice of first class or economy travel.

Immunization against polio will help you to avoid contracting the disease which leaves many children and adults severely crippled. This protection should be given to all under the age of forty.

BELGIUM BY TCA

Rich in interest for the visitor, Belgium has ancient cities, the forests of the Ardennes, breezy seaside resorts. It's also a very good starting point for a European tour. Fly TCA without change of plane to Brussels from Montreal. Choice of First Class or Economy class. Economy round trip from Montreal $493.20, or $49.32 down with the "Pay later" plan. Minding The Manners Of Europe's Drivers

BY MARY AND VANCE BORDON, IN THE NEW YORK TIMES

Much has been written about the different national characteristics of the European, but not enough about one important modern aspect of this study — the European as a motorist.

His characteristics in this field are national ones. His foibles, so mystifying to the visiter at first encounter, are readily understandable in the light of national temperament. Fortunately, there are clues available. These begin with the national identification plates which, under international agreements all border-crossing cars in Europe carry next to their license plates.

The plates are simple, consisting of black letters on a white background, but to the player who knows the game they convey a wreath of meaning. And often a warning.

"B" is for Belgium, a country which is rich and exuberant, thanks to her gold, ivory and uranium from the Congo. Luxurious, giddy, fattening, beautiful things from all over the world are spread out before the Belgian. He rushes from one opulent treat to another, often changing course midway to savor a third.

The Belgian is the same when he decides to drive a car. It is not necessary for him to obtain a driver's license or to take a road test. These would merely delay his spontaneous rush. Away he goes, faster, faster, faster.

He does, indeed, stop for red lights, because such pauses give him a chance to review and alter his plans, to make a happier choice of direction. By the time the light changes, he is ready to turn from wherever he has been headed, to wherever he has now decided to head. The canny tourist freezes like a rabbit at this moment. Our flamboyant Belgian accelerates wildly to a point three feet ahead of the line of traffic. Then he cuts across in front of the next car, one way or another. When he almost crashes into some cringing victim, he shakes a fist and glares back over his shoulder as he roars away.

No matter what the Belgian driver seems about to do, he does something else, at the last possible moment, with all possible speed. There seem to be two Belgians in every driver's seat, disputing the next move.

This, too, has an explanation, for Belgium is divided into two parts, the Dutch-speaking Flemish in the north, and the more volatile Walloons, who speak French, in the south. Even the road signs have two names for each city.

"D" is for Deutschland, where the autobahns roll widely from Bremerhaven to Stuttgart, from Kaiserslautern to Munich. The qualities that made them formidable in war make the Germans good company on the road. The "D" car is in good repair. The driver is methodical. So industriously, since the war, has he hurried to the factory before dawn, that he can now afford to drive abroad.

The troubles of the "D" drivers are their own, not ours. The Dutch, for example, had many troubles with the Germans during the war years, and these difficulties the Dutch remember well. When a German tourist asks directions in the Netherlands even now, they tell him, "You found your way during the war. Look about you."

"E" is for Espagna, a terrifying symbol on the road. Every Spanish boy yearns to be a bullfighter. Before the age when American boys are out on the baseball diamond, little Spaniards are learning to work close to the bull, to hold firm in the path of his rush, to move aside only a little, at the last possible moment, with grace and style. Speed and brilliance mark the performer of courage; the cautious merit no "Ole!"

Only a handful of great ones can follow Manolete and Belmonte to national acclaim in the bull ring, but 100,000 Spanish males drive cars. Then, on the narrow winding road, comes the fulfillment of the early dream. Every Spanish motorist sees himself in the matador's regalia at last. Every oncoming car is the bull.

Can he swerve around the laboring truck, into the path of onrushing death, and make the "pass," as a bullfighter should, in exultation? He finds his "moment of truth," again and again, on curves at the top of hills.

And there is the horn. The sober, controlled Dutch hardly use the horn at all, blinking their lights day or night to seek passage. Horns, by French law, should be used only in case of

Italian Line Schedules Are Largest Since War

Six different ships of Italian Line will serve its New York-Mediterranean route with a total of 126 crossings during 1960, 61 eastbound and 65 westbound. The new schedule will give the Line the greatest number of sailings in any postwar year, with a total of 162,433 berths.

During the first four months of 1960, five vessels of the Line — the turboships Cristoforo Colombo and Conte Biancamano, and the motorvessels Augustus, Vulcania, and Saturnia, will service the New York run. The 23,562 gross-ton Conte Biancamano, permanently transferred from the Italy-South America service, will make ten sailings from New York during 1960. In May and June, the m/v Giulio Cesare, substituting for the Conte Biancamano on the Line's Italy-South America express route, will make two special round trips on the North America service.

The Line's New York-Mediterranean service will be augmented in July by the entry into service of its new flagship, the 33,500 gross-ton luxury liner Leonardo da Vinci, scheduled to leave Genoa on her maiden voyage, June 30, arriving in New York July 9. The Leonardo da Vinci and the Cristoforo Colombo will have calls scheduled at Gibraltar, Naples, Cannes, and Genoa.

TIME TO GET GOING!

Israel Is Now An International Convention Center

"With the opening this fall of the $3,500,000 Sheraton-Tel Aviv Hotel, with jets bringing Israel within 8½ hours of Rome and only 14 hours of New York, thereby cutting the travel span of most of the 100,000 tourists expected in Israel this year, and with more than 12 international conventions scheduled for 1960, Israel is entering into a new tourist era and is also emerging as an important new convention center," it was stated by Yohanan Beham, director of the Israel Government Tourist Office, as he spoke in Miami Beach on the occasion of the opening of a new Israel Government Tourist Office branch there, at 1544 Washington Avenue.

Mr. Beham pointed out that the 100,000 tourists represent a five-fold increase over 1949, Israel's first year of independence. In 1959, 91,820 tourists visited Israel.

In discussing Israel's new tourist era, Mr. Beham spoke of these major attractions:

A new 18-hole golf course will open this June in the ancient port of Caesarea. The golf course situated along the Mediterranean, is near beautiful Roman excavations. A new swimming pool and other tourist facilities are being built nearby.

With the new Sheraton-Tel Aviv, Israel will have 15 luxury or Class A hotels. These and the 150 Class B and C hotels are able to accommodate 10,000 travellers at any one time. To meet the steadily increasing demands of tourists, existing hotels are expanding their facilities and negotiations are under way with various American investors to build additional first class hostelries in Israel.

The number of flights to Israel has increased to an average of 46 a week. Ten international airlines connect Israel with the rest of the world. It now takes only 5½ hours from Paris to Israel, 3⅛ hours from Rome and 14 hours from New York.

Sea connections have increased to 163 regularly scheduled sailings from the United States and Europe to Israel. The ZIM Lines are building a new ship which will be ready for the Mediterranean-Israel run in 1961; they also plan to build a large, new trans-Atlantic liner.

As a result of Israel's excellent year-round climate, the winter season is becoming increasingly more popular with visitors, and the Miami Beach branch will make Israel's winter attractions still more widespread.

There are 14 convention halls in Israel with a total seating capacity of 82,000. Each has a public address system, most are air-conditioned and have special lighting effects. Multi-lingual secretarial help, and translators, are available at reasonable rates.

A few of the conventions which will take place in Israel this year, are: the board of directors of the American Society of Travel Agents; the International Congress of Surgeons; in June, an International Conference on Housing; in July, the International Symposium on Linear Spaces at the Hebrew University, Jerusalem; in August, an international conference on Science, in which a number of Nobel Prize winners will participate, at the Weizmann Institute of Science; in November, mayors from all over the world will attend a congress of the International Union of Local Authorities.

In discussing other plans for the future, Mr. Beham singled out the International Pentacostal Convention which will take place in Israel in May 1961, with the participation of some 2,500 members; and the World Medical Association meeting which will take place in Israel, in 1962.

The 193-room Sheraton-Tel Aviv Hotel, in downtown Tel Aviv on the Mediterranean shore, is scheduled for completion and a grand opening in October. It was started about eight years ago by a syndicate of Israelis under the name of the Nordau Plaza Hotel, but the shell has been standing incomplete. The Israeli Government took over the property and sold it to the Hotel Corporation of Israel, an American company whose shares totalling $8,400,000 have been sold in the United States. The corporation expects to hold $400,000 in reserve, investing the remaining $3,000,000 in completing the hotel.

The Sheraton-Tel Aviv is expected to cost between $15,000 and $20,000 a room, about the going rate today for hotel rooms in Miami Beach, the more costly parts of the West Indies and in New York City. This will be the first Sheraton hotel outside United States and Canadian territory.

El Al Jets Now Include Plane To Shore Phone Calls On First Class Flights

First class passengers aboard El Al Israel Airlines' trans-Atlantic flights are now able to make telephone calls from their seats. It will not be possible to place calls to the plane, however. Routed via maritime coastal radio stations, the calls will cost about the same amount as conventional international calls — between $6 and $9 for three minutes. The cost will be more if the calls have to be routed via London and the trans-Atlantic cable. Telephone facilities will be restricted to first-class passengers because extra service to economy-class passengers is limited by rules of the International Air Transport Association.

El Al Israel Airlines provide jet-prop Britannias, for their trans-Atlantic service. The jet-prop Britannia, called the "Whispering Giant" combines the finest elements of both the jet plane, and the classic propeller-driven aircraft; and it is the fastest, smoothest, quietest, largest, long-range liner flying the air routes. El Al flies from New York, to London, Amsterdam, Brussels, Paris, Zurich, Vienna, Munich, Rome, Athens, Istanbul, Nicosia, Tel Aviv, Johannesburg and Teheran.

There is quiet, almost no vibration; El Al Israel deluxe cuisine, service and accommodation provide all comforts for the exacting traveller; and of course, there are nose-radar; and the most up-to-date navigational and safety instruments.

El Al, pioneered nearly a decade before the establishment of Israel, will arrange trips and tours for any budget, with economy, first-class and deluxe service; and berths available at additional charges on all trans-Atlantic flights.

El Al will arrange and map any itinerary for the traveller, including escorted tours; plans for all-inclusive arrangements; such as accommodation, sightseeing, transfers, tips and taxes at hotels.

HOW TO TIP IN FRANCE'S NEW CURRENCY

One hundred "old" francs or one nouveau franc is the tipping equivalent of the American quarter. Either one (per bag or per special service) pleases bellboy, porter, doorman or sleeping-car conductor.

Give the concierge 1 nouveau franc per special service or 5 at the end of your stay; the chambermaid, 1 nouveau franc per day; theatre ushers, 1 nouveau franc for showing you to your seats. Taxi drivers gets 15% of the fare (which doubles after 11 p.m.); so do waiters when service is not included on your check.

In time of disaster such as floods, hurricanes, fires or earthquakes, it is necessary that volunteer helpers must be called upon. Courses in fire-fighting, first aid, rescue work and other branches of emergency aid, are available through civil defence organization.

KLM, Royal Dutch Airlines, Has New Jet Service On Non-Stop Flights

In introducing the magnificent DC-8 Jetliner on its non-stop services to and from Europe, KLM provides greater speed, spaciousness and luxury, together with the special hospitality and personalized service, which have been a tradition for over forty years with KLM.

KLM will arrange touring plans with sight-seeing excursions and hotel accommodation in first class or standard class touring accommodations, and these are, of course, independent of a choice of land-touring KLM Trans-Atlantic crossing — for instance, the passenger can travel on Economy Class on KLM across the Atlantic, and use First Class travel arrangements in Europe.

KLM's stopover plan enables the traveller to visit any city free of extra fare if it's on the way to the farthest city of a planned itinerary. Tours and plans can be adjusted with ease at any KLM ticket office, in accordance with a traveller's own requirements — and of course, air tours, land tours and itineraries, and KLM overseas flight plans can all be made at no extra cost to the passenger.

Holland America Offers Spring Cruise From Montreal, Wide Range Of European Sailings

The Holland-America Line, renowned for cruises emanating from New York, has scheduled for the Canadian service a 15-day cruise of the SS Ryndam on July 26, from Montreal and Quebec City and return, highlighted by calls at Gaspe, Bermuda and New York.

This summer cruise will afford Canadians for the first time the opportunity of commencing a cruise holiday from their own door-step, with an attractive minimum rate of $295.00.

The ship will head towards Bermuda via north of Cape Breton Island. After a three and a half day trip from the last port of call she will enter the picturesque land-locked harbour of Hamilton, Bermuda's capital. For the next couple of days the passengers are free to browse through the island's many quaint shops, stroll the fine coral sand beaches and visit the numerous historical points of interest.

Sailing on to New York and for those who have not entered the fabulous city by ship, this is indeed a fantastic sight, passing the Statue of Liberty and the impressiveness of the downtown skyline is something that will be long remembered. While in New York as throughout the entire cruise, the air-conditioned Ryndam serves as a hotel.

The flagship Rotterdam, the luxury liner Nieuw Amsterdam and the deluxe Statendam sail every Friday from New York for Europe; and the Ryndam Canadian schedule has a variety of sailings from Montreal, Quebec and Halifax. The Maasdam sails monthly from New York; and the Westerdam and Noordam fortnightly.

The Holland-America Line, with eighty-seven years of experience, can now claim the distinction of being the second largest trans-atlantic passenger line; and headed by their new flagship, the 36,645 ton Rotterdam, which first entered service in September 1959, the line offers the travelling public first and tourist class accommodation in completely air-conditioned and stabilizer-equipped vessels. The new Rotterdam, together with the stately 36,667 ton Nieuw Amsterdam maintain a service of excellence from New York to Le Havre, Southampton and their home port of Rotterdam. These vessels also are among the world's largest cruise liners with the Rotterdam being the newest and biggest.

The recently built, and yacht-like 24,294 ton Statendam is a superb example of the modern predominantly Tourist Class liner; and more than 90% of her Tourist Class accommodations have private facilities.

How To See Europe By Rail

The dollar may not go very far these days, but 125 of them will take a tourist from here, all over Western Europe, and then some.

An investment of this amount in what is known as a Eurailpass entitles the traveler to first-class accommodations on the national railroads of thirteen countries. They are Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland. The pass also can be used on certain private railroads and on ferryboats and steamers, particularly those that ply the Rhine and Danube Rivers and the Swiss lakes.

The popularity of the Eurailpass is evident in the fact that more than 6,000 such tickets have been sold since their introduction just a year ago, writes Sherman Davis, in the New York Times.

The Eurailpass becomes effective the day it is used for the first time and it is valid for two months thereafter. It is sold exclusively in North and South America and, therefore, must be purchased by the tourist before he leaves for Europe. It is available at half-price to children under 10 years old; youngsters under 4 ride free.

To lay out $125 for a railroad ticket, on top of the cost of the airplane or ship fare to Europe, may seem like an unnecessary expenditure at the time to many prospective tourists. But the advantages are numerous.

The Eurailpass may be used as many times, and to as many places, as the tourist desires. He can, in effect, become a Continental commuter. The only additional railroad expenses he need incur are the costs of a sleeping accommodation or Pullman seat and dining car meals. It is not necessary for him to stand in line, carry bulky strips of tickets or make reservations. All the tourist has to do is show the Eurailpass to the conductor. And, should reservations be desired, Eurailpass includes this service without extra charge.

The plan has proved an asset to those traveling abroad on a limited budget, particularly students and teachers. By purchasing this "package" rail ticket in advance, they can estimate their potential expenditures more carefully and, in many cases, avert the danger of becoming stranded in a foreign country because of a lack of funds. Also overcome is the language problem; many is the tourist who has missed a train or who has been routed erroneously because of the failure of the ticket agent to understand him, and vice versa.

The idea of such a ticket was discussed as far back as 1953. At that time, European railroad executives realized that a new era of tourism was upon them and that, for the most part, the American visitor did not confine his travels to one country. Their talks resulted in the Eurailpass.

Many tourists, of course, will argue that, despite the itinerary they have planned, they would not spend $125 for rail transportation. But this can easily be contradicted. For example, the cost of a one-way first-class ticket between Paris and Nice is $26.80, plus $22.10 for a single compartment. And it is more than likely that the European traveler will, within a two-month period (the duration of a Eurailpass), get to more cities than Paris and Nice. Also, statistics show that trips made by the average Eurailpass user would have cost between $250 and $400.

The Eurailpass can be purchased through any authorized travel agent or at the domestic offices of the French National Railroads, in Montreal.

Effective May 29, the Simplon Orient Express will cut 6 hours and 55 minutes off its present 65-hour, 55-minute run between Paris and Istanbul. There will also be a new overnight train, the Lombardy Express, between Paris and Milan.

need, and not at all in Paris. How different for the fiery Spaniards who face the toros at every corner, every intersection, every passing. In Spain, when the inevitable accidents are investigated, police always ask, "Did you blow your horn?" Always, therefore, before taking a curve on the wrong side, the Spaniard sounds his horn.

"F" is for France, to which we look for elegant manners, gallantry, the civilized touch. Its vehicles do not fail us. French trucks have a little, green signal light at the rear, which the driver uses courteously to indicate that the road is clear to pass. French cars are required to have amber headlamps to avoid glaring at oncoming traffic.

But just drive toward them at night, with probing white lights. One faces fury, a frenzy of communication. "F" manipulates his light switch. "Turn them down," he signals, blacking his own lights entirely for dangerous moments. Getting no response, he stabs with his own at the moment of passing.

The French Government has ruled: "Amber lighting is obligatory for French-registered vehicles, and tourists are strongly recommended to adopt this form of light." Dim or be stabbed. Perhaps it is best to travel in France by day, and save the nights for cuisine and champagne, cognac and cabarets.

"GB" is for Great Britain, where the cars have a righthand drive. To pass a car on its left, as the Briton must on the Continent, he has to pull out into the passing lane, with no idea of what may be coming. Most of the time he muddles through. Wise Britons carry a navigator in the left front seat. Forget the "GB" driver, look for his co-pilot.

"I" is for Italy, about which the Guide Michelin has issued a warning. "Care cannot be too strongly recommended," it says, "as Italian drivers are known occasionally to take risks for which it is wise to be prepared."

The genius that led Italians to invent opera has found a new outlet on the roads. The Italian's driving goes beyond mere skill; it is art, a virtuoso performance. He swoops around corners, missing a crash by centimeters; he passes another car in a bottleneck which seems barely wide enough for one; bearing down on a strolling crowd he scatters pedestrians

Air France New Jet Flights Will Give World-Wide Service

Daily nonstop jet flights between New York and Paris were inaugurated this winter, by Air France, with its Boeing 707 "Intercontinental" leaving New York at 7 P.M. and arriving in Paris at 7:45 A.M. Paris time, six and three-quarter hours later. In the other direction, flights will leave Paris at 1 P.M. Paris time, arriving in New York at 8 P.M. the same day.

The planes have thirty-two first-class accommodations and ninety in economy class. The service will be stepped up to three daily flights each way this spring and be expanded to include flights between Paris and Chicago and Paris and Los Angeles in early April. In May it will become round-the-world service when Transports Aeriens Intercontinentaux flights across the Pacific link with Air France service to Los Angeles.

The interiors were completely designed and installed in France. The spacious De Luxe cabin, the Promenade Bar, the Economy Class cabin — even the seats — were Paris-inspired. The atmosphere is bright, cheerful, subdued, restful. Exquisite care went into each phase of the design. The colors, for example, were chosen after they had been tested not only on the ground, but in actual flight 34,000 feet up.

Decor, service, cuisine everything spells France: scenes from various French provinces, including flowers, music, vintage wines; and food which is truly fabulous!

With Air France's speed, efficiency and extraordinary courtesy, on these new 707 jets there are more stewards and hostesses to give you more service than ever before.

Another "plus" from Air France, the leader in air travel: to Paris by "Intercontinental" — then by speedy, silent "Caravelle" jet for fastest-ever service to all Europe and the Middle East.

On January 31, the giant four engine jet Boeing 707 Intercontinental made its first flight from New York to Paris flying the French colors. Now flight time is 6 hours 45 minutes, and service will be on a daily basis. In a few short weeks, Air France will also inaugurate regular services on the Montreal-Paris run, with a flying time of 6 hours and 15 minutes, non-stop.

The Boeing 707 is the world's most proven jetliner, having flown hundreds of millions of passenger miles. No other jetliner in commercial aviation has had anywhere near the amount of in-flight testing and regularly scheduled service in its performance record.

like a fox among chickens, bringing his act to a triumphant finale as he dives safely into a parking space fully large enough for a tricycle.

In this melee on wheels, every Roman is master of his role. Confident that the other performers know the music, he feels free to ad lib or improvise as he goes along. What seems like a near collision is only a duet by two drivers with flawless timing. That wild man, careening from the wings into the stream of traffic, is merely embellishing an aria known to all.

The Italian Government is sympathetic to these maestros of the accelerator. It sets no speed limits.

"NL" is for Netherlands, the tidy, orderly, flat land of new cars on straight roads. Dutch autobahns have no nonsense about them. They are the shortest distance between two points. In another age the world became familiar with the wild, headstrong Dutchman we now see on the highways. He was a daring adventurer who rushed in recklessly and won Indonesia, Malaya, Ceylon. Today all these conquests are gone, and only careful husbanding of resources, patient stockpiling of exports, and tedious monotony and prudence remain.

When the Netherlander can stand it no longer, he gets into his car to blow off steam. He abides by the laws because, much as they cramp him, controls are the key to his future. What he is allowed to do he does full force at full speed. If the sign says 70 k. p. h. he drives at 70 kilometers per hour, no matter what may be in the way. If the car on the right has the right of way then the literal Dutchman does not even look to the left, because it is not his responsibility. Watch the "NL" to the right. He is right.

"USA" is for the American in his big car. He uses the same technique for driving in Europe that his ancestors used to open up the American wilderness. He is loaded with provisions — cigarettes, cleansing tissue, powdered coffee, gin and vermouth. Some of it is for survival, the remainder for barter.

He speaks none of the native tongues, relying instead on sign language and rewarding his interpreter not with iron pots or glass beads but with chewing gum.

See him today, warily approaching the streets of an unknown village. Like Lewis and Clark reaching the fork of the Missouri, he will explore ahead on foot before committing his wagon to a tributary too narrow in which to effect a turn.

And, just as the great explorers transferred to smaller craft more suitable for the terrain, so the American in Europe is trading in his big car for the smaller one which the inhabitant builds for his narrow roads. But the "USA" driver is still the explorer, still the great adventurer who will continue his quest for as long as his supplies hold out.

Eastern Airlines Electras Give Four Flights Daily To Miami

Eastern Air Lines became the first airline to operate its own jets between New York and Miami, when it began daily service with its 118-seat DC-8B over the route last month.

Eastern's jet flights take only two hours and fifteen minutes from Idlewild, leaving daily, for Miami. This gives Eastern thirteen daily nonstop flights to Miami. The Golden Falcon jet flights leave Montreal on daily flights to Miami, at 10.30 a.m., 2.00 p.m., and 10.30 p.m., and the Super G Constellation Owl leaves at 10 p.m. To New York, there are eight daily non-stop prop-jet Electra flights, taking only eighty minutes; and to Mexico, Eastern operates the only all first class daily service.

Eastern Air Lines extended its Electra network last year, to include Washington, Newark and Montreal. It first introduced Electras on the New York-Miami run last January.

The Electra can land on runways as short as only 5,000 feet, making it one of the most adaptable planes ever built. Because the basic power unit of the Electra is a jet engine, albeit geared to a propeller, the effect on the passengers is the same as achieved on the pure jet plane: the elimination of fatigue caused by vibration and noise on piston engine planes. In addition to the almost complete absence of vibration, the Electra is far quieter than planes powered by thumping reciprocating engines. And the aisles are wide and roomy, the decor bright and cheery.

Teen-Age Reform Jews Found Content With Faith

Reform Jewish youths across the U.S. believe anti-Semitism is dead or dying, according to a survey to be distributed this year by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Because of this and an increase in temple training, the study indicated, Jewish teen-agers are not running away from Judaism as their parents may have done twenty years ago. They feel much more secure in being Jews. They think it is all right to date boys and girls who are not of their faith. They say, however, that they are strongly against intermarriage.

The teenagers detailed their beliefs about men, women, and God to Rabbi Jerome K. Davidson at regional camps of the National Federation of Temple Youth, an affiliate of the union of congregations, says The New York Times. He drew responses from 822 young people through questionnaires and from thirty-six more in two-hour interviews.

"Anti-Semitism doesn't threaten these kids any more," Rabbi Davidson said in an interview recently. "They're not trying to leave Judaism."

His figures showed that 95 per cent of those who answered said they would be reborn as Jews if they had a choice and had it to do over.

One reason for this trend, the rabbi said, is that the "religious revival" has hit Jews as well as Christians in the U.S. A second is that the boys and girls questioned did not feel any anti-Jewish sentiment in the communities where they lived, and from that they generalized that it did not exist elsewhere.

Today in America, the rabbi said, Judaism is accepted as an American faith — if you are a Protestant, Catholic, or a Jew, you are considered part of the mainstream. Twenty years ago, he said, other Americans considered Jews to be of a marginal faith.

In his report, Rabbi Davidson, who is assistant rabbi of Temple Beth El, in Great Neck, L. I., suggests that rabbis who educate children to meet anti-Semitism are dealing with a problem of yesterday. It would be far more significant, he said, for them to train youth to see their social responsibilities as Jews in the American community.

Rabbi Davidson found surprisingly little social idealism among the young people he talked to, and he thinks this might be an extension of their feeling of security.

"Their lack of idealism comes from being satisfied with being American teen-agers," he said. "They are not rebelling against their parents, and they are not rebelling against the world — except on the intellectual level. They hate segregation, and they hate the suffering of the poor. But they see little of this in their communities, so it doesn't bother them."

One point on which Rabbi Davidson found some disagreement between teen-agers and their parents was the issue of dating outside the faith, says the New York Times. Seventy-eight per cent of those answering said they agreed with the statement "I would have no objections to going out alone on a date with a non-Jew."

Yet when it came to marrying a non-Jew, they were against that by as large a margin as they were for dating across religious lines. Some said they feared the religious problems that would arise, but most, the rabbi said, put it more positively: "They fear intermarriage because they want to remain Jews, have Jewish sponses, Jewish children and Jewish homes."

Sun Life Sales In 1959 Over One Billion Dollars

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada sold over one billion dollars of life insurance in 1959, a new record, George W. Bourke, president, told the 89th annual meeting of the company in Montreal.

"In all areas of our operations, 1959 was a year of new records," he declared. The 1959 sales were up $52 million over the preceding year and totalled $1,041,997,000. Mr. Bourke said this was more than all the insurance issued by the company during the first 50 years of its operations.

Total insurance in force at year end was $8,938,122,000, an increase of 6.9 per cent over the amount in force at the end of 1958. Of this, group life insurance accounted for $3,319,079,000. Group insurance sales in 1959 totalled $312,429,000 — up 17.5 per cent.

The company's annuity business increased during the year and at December 31 stood at the equivalent of $2,718,161,000 of life insurance. Life insurance and annuities combined were the equivalent of $11,656,283,000 of life insurance.

Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries were $179,315,000 in 1959 — an average of $705,000 for each working day. The total was an increase of $20 million over 1958 payments. Of the total $125,015,000 was paid to living policyholders and annuitants which included $3,024,000 paid under group accident and sickness policies.

Sun Life assets increased during the year by $92 million to $2,307,412,000. Mr. Bourke said 1959 was a favorable year for the investment of new funds, both for quality of issues offered and interest return available. The company earned a net 4.40 per cent on all invested assets as against 4.28 per cent net in 1958.

During the year $31,300,000 was added to the bond portfolio. About $76 million was loaned in new mortgages, and, at year end, Sun Life mortgage loans, numbering 55,680, totalled $551,075,000. Sun Life income from all sources was $372,265,000, an increase of $21 million over 1958.

In his address, Mr. Bourke spoke about the "double duty" dollars of life insurance. The phrase, he said, draws attention to the fact that policyholders' dollars, "besides providing protection for families and savings for old age, aid the economy when invested by the company in thousands of community projects. These dollars earn interest which is paid to policyholders in dividends, and to both policyholders and beneficiaries in policy benefit.

"The individual life insurance policy has, for many years, been one of the main avenues for the savings of our people and an important part of our national savings." Mr. Bourke said the increase in productive facilities, services, and consumption has been going on in Canada at a faster pace than the country's financial capacities permit.

The annual Moess Chittin Appeal to provide kosher Passover supplies for the needy overseas has been launched here. Samuel Harvey is chairman of the U.J.R.A. in Canada. The appeal must begin immediately for kosher supplies to be purchased and shipped overseas in time for the holiday season. This year it assumes greater proportions because of the much higher number of people depending on it in view of the unusually strained situation confronting many Jewish communities overseas. The funds raised in Canada pay for matzohs, matzo meal, wine, and other Passover products in Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Yugoslavia, Albania, and the Moslem countries. Kosher Passover products will also be distributed in Poland as a result of the resumption of J.D.C. activities there. In Israel J.D.C. Malben institutions buy their products there. A part of Canadian funds furnishes kosher Passover supplies for refugee rabbis and Yeshivah students in Israel, in cooperation with the Mizrachi Organization of Canada.

W. Z. O. May Let Non-Zionists Take Part In Cause

The World Zionist Organization is undergoing a radical revision of its constitution to permit non-Zionist participation in its affairs, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, W. Z. O. president, said in New York. This is aimed at bringing about "greater unity of the Jewish people" on a world-wide scale, and of mustering greater moral and financial support for the State of Israel, he said.

Dr. Goldmann, who had returned from a trip to Europe and Israel, spoke at a press conference at the 16 E. 66th Street offices of the Jewish Agency for Israel, of which he is also chairman, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Zionist leader said a second major constitutional change is under consideration — to decentralize the movement to the point that policy-making authority be vested in autonomous local Zionist bodies rather than in the periodically convened Zionist Congresses.

The movement to permit and seek non-Zionist affiliation reflects the changing role of the Zionist movement since the establishment of Israel in 1948. Dr. Goldmann said Zionism now is no longer a political movement because all political functions have been turned over to the sovereign government of Israel.

He described the present position of Zionism as being devoted to non-political considerations involving the spiritual unity of world Jewry, Jewish educational and cultural development, and the spiritual affinity of Jews for Israel.

Non-Zionist groups professing the same aims would increase their effectiveness by establishing links with Zionism, he said, thereby avoiding duplication of effort and wasted money and manpower. He described Jewish community life in the United States up to now as "organized chaos".

Dr. Goldmann said he is carrying on negotiations with representatives of various Jewish organizations in the United States, Britain, and Latin America to effect their representation in the Zionist movement, says the New York Herald Tribune. At a recent convention of the United Synagogue of America, which represents Conservative Jewish congregations throughout the United States and Canada, consideration of the question of affiliating with the World Zionist Organization was postponed for two years.

He said Israel "should be able to provide teachers, rabbinical leaders, and social workers to those scattered, Jewish communities throughout the world, which are in dire need of personnel of all kinds to maintain their very existence."

National Climax Of Bicentenary Of Canadian Jewry, Sponsored By C.J.C., Is Big Celebration, With Fulsome Participation

The national climax of the bicentenary of Canadian Jewry celebrations, sponsored by the Canadian Jewish Congress, took place in Toronto, Canada's second oldest and second largest Jewish community, which held an all-day celebration. At a meeting attended by several thousand people in the Canadian Room of the Royal York Hotel at 8.30 in the evening, Their Excellencies the Governor-General of Canada, the Hon. Georges P. Vanier and Mrs. Vanier, were guests of honour. The Governor-General spoke warmly of the development of the Jews in Canada, responding to an introduction by Samuel Bronfman, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, who said:

"Those of you who are gathered here have done so to pay tribute to the National Bicentenary of Canadian Jewry. Canada is a great lesson to the whole world for it shows that people can come from any corner of the globe, from places where they have experienced different traditions, habits, and climates, and yet find here an opportunity to help develop this wonderful country and call it their own. Here they can contribute to Canada's growth, yet cherish their own special cultures, for Canada is widely celebrated as a country in which two great cultures are honoured, French and English. The French have always been strong for maintaining their own culture even as we have. It is our good fortune that we have in Her Majesty's representative a man who is himself a product of the dual culture and who is pre-eminently a man of goodwill."

Saul Hayes, executive vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress and the main speaker said:

"The history of Canadian Jewry is a short history indeed in the sweep of civilization. Two hundred years is almost, in the Biblical terms, as of yesterday. It must be considered, however, in the perspective of the history of Canada, in fact in the history of the entire continent. What is our study of history? It is the age-old dilemma of a Jewish survival and a Jewish culture.

"It is the story of the Babylonian Jewry of the sixth century before the Christian Era, over-awed by the might and prestige of Babylon. It is the story of Alexandrian Jewry from about the time of the first century to about the third century of the present era and what has happened to it. It is also the story of the Golden Age of Moorish Jewry. It may be the story of United States Jewry. In other words, Canadian Jewish history is 200 years old, but the history of the Jews, some of whom are in Canada, is 4,000 years old.

"The Jews of Babylon were over-awed by the might and prestige of the conqueror. The Alexandrian Jews fell victim to the persuasive and pervasive Hellenistic culture; life was very good for them, there was no anti-Semitism, they were full participants in a mighty culture. Moorish Jewry continued on into Catholic Spain and became victim of the theology of the Dominican Inquisitors.

"American Jewry is sometimes called a wasteland, but it is too early to say whether this description is truly apt or whether the seeds of a very flourishing culture will make it the significant Jewry. This is the challenge of the Twentieth Century. For the Jewish community of this country the challenge is how we will be able to remain comfortable with two civilizations, with two cultures. For us to be a successful Jewry the agenda for the next generation, in fact for the next few generations, will have to be seeking, striving to remain loyal to the values which make us Jews and at the same time an integral part of the Canadian scene.

"However, one does not face the future generation with an agenda. This is for textbooks only. Certain things are inescapable and as Mordecai Kaplan once termed it: "Courage to face the facts is one of the inescapable things". There will be no Jewish community in Canada if we here today do not succeed in deepening the respect for and knowledge of our past and our religious values as well as our understanding of the philosophic basis on which a Jewish community exists.

"On the other hand there will be no Jewish community in Canada if the Jews in Canada are not at the same time fully part of Canadian cultural values and the warp and fabric of Canadian life. If we choose the one we will live in a ghetto wherein no sunshine dwells. If we choose only the other we can forget all our past and all our glories. Fortunately, the choice does not have to be one or the other. It is possible to have the best of two worlds."

Lavy M. Becker, chairman of the national bicentenary committee; Jacob Finkelman, chairman of the Canadian Jewish Congress Central Region; the Hon. John Robarts, Minister of Education, and Mayor Nathan Phillips brought greetings. Monroe Abbey, chairman of the national executive committee of Canadian Jewish Congress, came from Montreal to attend this celebration. Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg, Rabbi, and Dr. Walter Wurzburger, Rabbi, gave the opening and closing prayers. Rabbi Reuben Slonim, chairman of the bicentenary committee for the Central Region, introduced Dr. S. B. Hurwich who spoke in Yiddish. Cantor Moshe Koussevitsky sang in Hebrew and Yiddish and the Bicentenary Proclamation was read by Paul Kligman, Jacob Reinglas, and Ruth Segal in English, Yiddish, and Hebrew, respectively.

The Honourable J. Keiller Mackay, Q.C., Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Mrs. Mackay, and the Honourable Leslie M. Frost, Q.C., Prime Minister of Ontario, and Mrs. Frost, attended a civic luncheon served by Mayor Nathan L. Phillips, Q.C., and the Toronto City Council at the Royal York Hotel. Approximately 200 guests attended, among them descendants of the first Jewish families who settled in Canada and in Toronto.

Mayor Phillips drew attention to his brother-in-law, Kennath de Sola Joseph, a descendant of the Joseph family which settled in the city of Quebec in the 1700s. Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg, of Holy Blossom Temple, gave the benediction. Mayor Phillips, in presenting a testimonial on behalf of the city of Toronto to J. Irving Oelbaum, national vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, mentioned the contribution Jewish Canadians have made to Canada. Mr. Oelbaum responded. Julius Hayman, vice-chairman of the bicentenary committee of the Central Region read the Bicentenary Proclamation which he presented to Mayor Phillips.

In the afternoon the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Mackay held a reception at Queens Park to which a large cross-section of Jewish community leadership throughout Ontario was invited. Assisting in receiving were: The Mayor and Mrs. Nathan Phillips, and Mesdames J. I. Oelbaum, B. B. Shapiro, Abraham L. Feinberg, A. B. AUDITED PAID CIRCULATION ABC

The Canadian Jewish Review is one of only 35 Audit Bureau of Circulations magazines in Canada. It gives wide, city-to-city coverage for your advertising message, and reaches a select consumer audience. The Canadian Jewish Review is received every Friday in the mail, and is read by the family groups which gather together for the Sabbath observance on Friday nights. Every issue is a guide to planning and purchasing through each week. Items of interest to women, as well as to the family in general appear in every issue. It is a community record; it is informative about the trends in Jewish thought, and the important Jewish world news of the day. The Canadian Jewish Review reaches the able-to-buy homes, with high-ranking purchasing power, where quality and prestige of goods and services are of paramount importance.
